

An Essay Written, and Read in
Morgantown, by Miss Nannie L.
Morehead.

Brother and Sister Murphy:

In attempting to discharge the duty assigned me, I am not so vain as to suppose that I can offer you anything very interesting, or contribute very materially to your entertainment. I shall not attempt to bring forth arguments to convince your minds that intemperance is an evil, for of that fact, I take it for granted you are already very profoundly convinced. If you are not, I can but invite you to a review of the past. If the long catalogues of crime, shame, degradation, suffering and misery, are not sufficient to convince you, I could expect to do but little for your enlightenment. If the sad experience of my sex in all ages, the river of tears and continents of untold graves have no logic in them, then in vain may I attempt to arrange facts or arguments or clothe them in the most attractive habiliments of eloquent language. No, I am satisfied there is not one within the sound of my voice to-night who has not seen or felt enough to convince any rational being that intemperance is an evil and one in comparison with which, must all others pale into utter insignificance. But I propose to improve this occasion by offering you a few thoughts from the standpoint of a young, inexperienced girl, before whom the rainbow tints of the future are unclouded by sad experience, or before whose youthful imagination bright pictures of happiness are ever floating, and around whose earthly aspirations cluster the rich profusion of the brightest hopes of the future. From this standpoint I offer you a few thoughts. Am I an exception? Am I amongst the few who have thus stood in the morning of life—am I alone? Ah, no! thousands of my sex have trodden the flowery paths of youthful innocence, and dreamed of happiness in the future, which, like some ignis fatuus, was ever eluding their grasp. Thousands and thousands of them at the close of a sad life have pointed their pale and attenuated fingers to those of my age and with the solemn huskiness of death have whispered, Beware! Shall we not heed this warning? Shall we not profit by this sad experience? Shall we not stop and think before it is too late? Do I hear one of my friends saying, "I am not afraid to trust my sweetheart if he does take his drink." How many thousands have made life miserable by having too much faith in the dream drinkers. There might be some apology for the old and infirm, the sick and invalid to take a little alcohol in the way of medicine; but for a young man in the freshness and bloom of early manhood to undertake to excuse himself is supremely absurd, it is immeasurably ridiculous. It is so strange that men with the solemn warnings of the past constantly before their eyes, and who claim so much superiority in matters of wisdom over the weaker sex, (as they are disposed to term us,) will so persistently follow in the dangerous road. Yet, they tell us good men, grant me, will you not refuse to promote intemperance? Oh, they have never seen how the half pint grows to pint, the pint to quart, the quart to gallon. They have never watched the drunkard's return and witnessed his neglect and ill treatment—never heard the last penny for their children turned into spirits—never woke to the knowledge that though the snow of December be on the ground, there is neither food nor fire to strengthen for the day's toil.

Go read the 25th chapter of Genesis, the history of Eusebius calling his birthright for a mess of pottage. Go read in the New Testament of Judas Iscariot selling his Redeemer for thirty pieces of silver. The verdict of the law has ever been that Judas was a poor financier, while upon Judas has been ever cast the malediction of mankind. But what would be their transactions compared with the man who sells domestic peace and happiness and virtue and hope and all that pertains to the good, for ardent spirits? Sells not only his own happiness, but the happiness of her he has solemnly promised to love. Then, my brother and sister Murphys, shall we strive in the good cause, and shall we do all in our power to promote temperance? Let us say we will, then as years pass by, like plumes dropped from the wings of time, we may adorn the chambers of our hearts with rich gems of thought, and our lives with good and noble actions.

Morgantown, Ky.
A gentleman of our acquaintance frequently visited a widow, who had a charming little daughter of six summers—or so there along there—who was endowed with a reasonable share of childish curiosity. Colonel Betsy called as usual one evening, and immediately the little darling ran and brought him a glass of water.
"Please, sir," said she, "I want you to drink this water."
"No thank you, my dear," said the Colonel. "I'm not thirsty."
"Well, sir, please drink it for me; I want you to."
"Very well," said the puzzled Colonel, "but why do you want me to drink it?"
"Because mamma says you drink like a fish, and I want to see how you do it."—[Southern Humorist.]

Robinson went up to his room the other afternoon, and noticed that there was only one match remaining in the box. "Now, if that should burn to night when I come in," he soliloquized, "what a fire I should be in." So he tried to see if it was a good one. It was.

A disconsolate Virginian writes that money is scarce and taxes devour everything a poor farmer makes. "Why, a man cannot take a drink," he says, "without having it dashed with two and half cents on the State debt and undergird at the same time a solo serenade from a Moffat punching ball."

The wife of a sexton belonging to one of the churches in a very healthy locality was last week interrupted in the middle of a harangue upon the hardness of times by a person who desired to sell her a couple of ducks. "Ducks?" exclaimed she. "How can I buy ducks or anything else? We have not buried a living soul this six months."
